Sub: - Excess Drawl of Gas

Sir,

We have allowed you to draw excess gas purely on temporary basis under day to day demand supply management. We are getting less gas supply from ONGCL which has resulted in pressure drop in the Gas pipeline network.

You are hereby advised to restrict the gas drawal within the contracted quantity immediately. Your cooperation in this regard will be highly solicited.

Thanking you,

Yours truly,

Kind Attn.: Shri. Vijay Agarwal, Managing Director

Dear Sir,

Sub: Supply of gas purely on temporary basis under day-to-day demand management scheme

Please refer to our Gas Sales Agreement dated 30.12.2005 for supply of natural gas to your existing plant at 143, Thenangudi, Sellur Post in the district of Karaikal in the Union Territory of Pondicherry.

2. Although long term availability of gas in the area is lesser than overall allocation, there may be occasions when additional gas become available on temporary / short term basis due to less drawl / no drawl, due to shut down by some consumers. During such period if it become possible, GAIL may consider within the permissible limit, to supply additional quantity of gas for shorter duration on days when such additional gas is available over and above the existing maximum contracted quantity of 20000 SCMD as mentioned in Article 5.01 of the contract dated 30.12.2005.

3. It may please be noted that such additional supply of gas to your plant under above circumstances would be purely "TEMPORARY" arrangement. This would not in any way regarded as giving any preferential rights to you/your Company towards any allocation or even an assurance for such supply or a continuing supply for such additional gas or for the purpose of any fresh allocation of supply of gas in future. GAIL reserves the right to discontinue the supply of such additional quantity and to allot the same in favour of any other party at its sole discretion.

4. It should further be noted that GAIL would have unrestricted right to discontinue the above "TEMPORARY" arrangements of supply without notice.

5. The BUYER specifically agrees that additional temporary supply of gas is only under the SELLER's Demand Management and such additional supply of gas to the BUYER doesn't create any preferential right on the BUYER towards any future allocation for distribution of gas against the SELLER. The above arrangements would not give the BUYER any prescriptive rights for future allocation of gas.

‘हिन्दी एक भाषा ही नहीं है, यह एक संस्कृति है’

6. It is clearly understood and agreed by the BUYER that the additional temporary supply of gas is on a purely "TEMPORARY" basis and is without prejudice to the right of the SELLER to terminate such supply without notice and SELLER/Govt. of India reserve the right to allocate additional quantities of gas to any of its customers/new parties to the execution of the BUYER and the terms and conditions of the Gas Supply Contract dated 30.12.2005.

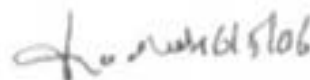

7. It may also be noted, during the period of temporary arrangement for supply of natural gas, supply shall be governed by following terms:

- i) In addition to the monthly transportation charge as per Article 10.2 of the above referred contract & amendments as applicable, M/s H & R Johnson (India) Ltd shall pay additional transportation charges @ Rs.1026.98/1000 SCM for supply of additional quantity of gas over and above maximum contracted quantity as mentioned in the Article 5.01 of the above referred contract.

All other terms and conditions of the Gas Supply Contract dated 30.12.2005 shall remain unchanged and this temporary arrangement for the supply of additional gas under above terms shall however be subjected to the terms & conditions of this letter and without prejudice to all rights and obligation of the SELLER & BUYER under the contract dated 30.12.2005.

Thanking you,

Yours faithfully
