(Version 02.0)

INFORMATION TO BE COMPLETED BY PANEL/ WG

Date and number of Panel / WG meeting:	27 Sept to 29 Sept 2022 / MP89
Title/Subject of the request for revision:	Revision to ACM0002 to include battery energy storage systems (BESS) to greenfield and existing renewable power generation power plants
Reference number of the request for revision:	AM_REV_0261
Exact reference (number, title and version) of the methodology or methodological tool to which the request for revision applies:	ACM0002: Grid-connected electricity generation from renewable sources --- Version 20.0
Summary of the request for revision:
The ACM0002 is applicable to renewable power generation projects including intermittent renewable energy sources such as wind and solar. The proposed request for revision incorporates a battery energy storage system (BESS) to an existing or greenfield renewable energy plant. The incorporation of this technology to renewable energy plants allows them to inject electricity during the time when there is demand. In this way, the renewable energy plants can store the electricity when it can be generated and inject it to the grid when there is demand. The BESS technology can positively contribute to the stability of the transmission system as it delays the requirement to reinforce the system in order to cope with an increasing share of distributed variable power injections derived from the high penetration of the wind and solar technologies in general.
