

The Clean Development Mechanism In Support of Appropriate Sustainable Development Goals

---

April 1, 2016

An incentive can be established to provide between twenty-five and fifty percent of expenditure for countries of the “North” to do projects in the “South”. It seemed to be a lack of Interest beyond Joint Implementation projects for Africa in a greater part and only a little more activity between Japan and SE Asia for Clean Development Mechanism (CDM) projects.

Many factors exist to include risk in some areas that greatly need investment in development and an incentive would apply to those particular one. A minimum and maximum sliding of incentive percentage could be developed to justify the risk.

Certain examples of projects worthy of implementation that have financial gaps that a CDM investment could bridge are available already that have replication worthiness that would Benefit the Planet, the People and a Profit to support not only Sustainable Development but an Expandable Development scenario.

Best regard,

Sidney Clouston, CEO*

Clouston Energy Research, LLC

1075 Howard Street

Lincoln Park, Michigan 48146 USA

Mobile: 503-320-9136

- International Director for RSECE (Sub Sahara Africa)
- www.rsece.org