The Project Developer Forum (PD Forum) would like to thank the EB for the updated “Information note on the highest tariffs applied by the Executive Board in its decisions on registration of projects in the People’s Republic of China” (Version 02)<sup>3</sup>, published on 4 July 2011.

The PD Forum does not believe that the concept of using the highest historical tariff is justified under CDM rules; however, the information note provides very clear information for project developers with regards to the EB’s demands in the additionality assessment. The PD Forum believes that the second version of this Information Note corrects the main mistakes in the earlier version.

The earlier mistakes had been pointed out to the EB on several occasions by the PD Forum, as well as by several other stakeholders, including by PPs whose projects were under review. Unfortunately many of these PPs’ arguments were not accepted and their projects consequently rejected. On the basis of the corrected Information Note, some of these projects should not have been rejected. While some PPs have resubmitted their projects, and have subsequently achieved registration of their projects, the rejected projects have lost a year or more of credits.

Following the discussions of EB61, it was apparent that mistakes were made in the preparation of the first Information Note. While EB members understood that demonstration and/or ODA-funded projects should be excluded from the lists, they were in fact included. Each of the corrections for wind are due to this mistake. The PD Forum, in its previous submissions, clearly and unambiguously showed the evidence that these tariffs were only available for demonstration and/or ODA-funded projects, including with references of verifications of these evidences.

The PD Forum hopes the EB will enable projects that would have been registered earlier if the EB’s direction regarding demonstration projects had been followed, to have their registration backdated, and duplicate registration fees refunded. Also, we believe that further improvements in the interaction with stakeholders are needed in order to help avoid similar situations in the future.
